How to report online bullying on Snapchat

According to Snapchat's Term of Service, you have to be aged 13 years old to have an account.

Reporting any concerns online

We as a school regularly take phone calls dealing with online issues and fall outs that spill into the classroom or playground. Where appropriate we will support children and families to resolve any issues that are in school. However if there are any issues out with school and in the local community, you as a parent/carer can report any online bullying by contacting the provider themselves and report a bullying incident. Blocking someone on Snapchat

Blocking someone on Snapchat will stop them from seeing your story or sending you snaps and chats. It can help if someone's sending you abusive messages.

To block someone:

- In Snapchat, open the chat for the person you want to block
- press the 3 lines in the top left hand corner
- press Block.

SnapChat

Snapshots automatically disappear once the person you sent them to has seen them. But they can still take screenshots and save them. That means that they'll have a copy of the photo even after Snapchat deletes it.

Make a report

If you receive an abusive or worrying message. It can help to take a screenshot so you've got a record. The person who messaged you will see if you've taken a screenshot, so it's important to think about how they might react if they knew.

If someone's bullying or harassing you, or sending naked pictures you can report that person to Snapchat.

To make a report:

- In the app, go to the person's Snapchat account
- Press the 3 dots or the cog wheel
- Press 'Report'

To report a Snapchat or Snapchat Live Story that contains nudity or bullying content:

- press and hold the snap or story
- press the flag in the bottom left hand corner
- select the reason you're making a report
- if you're reporting bullying you might be asked to give more information, it's important to explain as much as possible
- after you've made the report you'll be asked whether you would like to block the person, doing this can help to stop them upsetting you.
